Coast Publisher Named
To Press Institute Board

John Engstead

Otis Chandler

Otis Chandler, publisher of The Los Angeles Times, has been named to the advisory board of the American Press Institute of Columbia University. Dr. Grayson Kirk, president of the university announced yesterday that Mr. Chandler would fill the remaining two years in the term of Nick B. Williams, editor of The Los Angeles Times, who has resigned from the advisory board.

Dr. Kirk also announced that the four executives had been re-elected to full three-year terms on the board. They are Turner Catledge, executive editor, The New York Times; James H. Ottaway, president, Ottaway Newspapers-Radio, Campbell Hall, N.Y.; John E. Motz, president, publisher, and editor, The Kitchener-Waterloo Record, Kitchener, Ontario, and Joseph Pulitzer Jr., editor and publisher, The St. Louis Post Dispatch.
